

MARIO BATALI'S refrigerator:

"I always keep Parmigiano-Reggiano, Coach Farm green peppercorn [goat cheese], and pecorino Toscano. And a lot of wine. Stuff that looks like leftovers is food that Leo, our great babysitter from Acapulco, made. I'm not sure what ground flaxseed is doing in the fridge, but I think I will throw it out."

MIREILLE "FRENCH WOMEN DON'T GET FAT" GUILIANO'S refrigerator:

"I always have yogurt and champagne. French people eat yogurt like American people eat potato chips. All the yogurt is homemade in my Donvier yogurt maker. I eat the full-fat yogurt." Surely that takeout bag's got something bad in it? "It's actually red and white strawberries."

SALLY HERSHBERGER'S jeans.

Hair stylist and burgeoning brand Sally Hershberger has "at least 40 pairs of jeans" and wears jeans about 345 days a year. She keeps them on a hanger because they're easier to see that way.

The most she ever spent on denim was $1,200 (or the equivalent of two of her haircuts) for two vintage pairs at Fred Segal. "They'd been lowered, reworked, and bedazzled. But I only wore them for one season, so it wasn't a good purchase."
